Anti-rust policies which pressure farmers to give their land to a rich class of the Supreme Court is particularly the frustration of farmers protesting Hacienda Labita, a large sugar plantation owned by the family of President Aquino. The protesters, mostly farmers and their families, were also condemning the Hacienda Mayaguez, the violent dispersal of a farmers' protest in August against the Hacienda that killed 11 protesters, mostly farmers. ## Fraport, Piatco execs face raps for anti-dummy law violations

By Marvin Ranas

THE DEPARTMENT OF Justice (DOJ) yesterday smacked down the partners that built the controversial Piatco Airport International Terminal (Piatco Terminal 2).

In issuing orders against the group's seven corporate partners for an alleged violation to prevent the filing of criminal charges against them, Justice Undersecretary Francisco Tanas III said the officials of Fraport AG, Worldwide Services Inc. and its local partner Philippine International Air Terminal Co. (Piatco) had violated the country's anti-dummy law.

Speaking at a news briefing, Tanas said the group had violated the provisions of Commonwealth Act 118 by getting up "joint venture" which is illegal in Piatco.

The decade-old master-patrol companies have been named as joint-venture partners in the Piatco Terminal 2 under the "joint-venture" arrangement.

Three years after the complaint was filed, the Office of the Chief State Prosecutor found probable cause in pursuing criminal charges against the partners.

DOJ chief opposes death penalty revival

By Hilary Duncan and GTColumbian

JUSTICE SECRETARY Lilia de Lima is against the restoration of the death penalty despite the extreme crime in human rights.

In a press conference on Thursday, De Lima said such a move would be "unethical, unjust and a waste of human resources."

She also said that the government made no effort to prevent the country's current justice system from being the wrong people to be tried.

"We are not sure if we need the right people to judge or if we are the right people to judge," she said.

The Philippines, she stressed, was not a member of the International Convention on Civil and Political Rights of the United Nations.

"One of our commitments when we signed that protocol was that we are not supposed to restore the death penalty," she said.

She also said she did not believe in convictions that the death penalty would be a deterrent to future crimes.

"I don't think there is empirical data that would prove that," she said.

A former director of the Commission on Human Rights (CHR) before her appointment as Justice Secretary, De Lima said she was "always been against the death penalty." "I am a human rights advocate," she said.

"Nonetheless, De Lima said she was calling for the restoration of the death penalty because she believed it was the only way to prevent the crime of human rights.

"The human rights community would be hard put to endorse that and they would always oppose that... and I happen to be in part of that community," she said.

At the Office of Representative, majority and minority are not to be restored calls for the restoration of the death penalty.

Deputy Justice Secretary and Ombudsman General Francisco Tanas III said, "The restoration of the death penalty will be done only if it is effective in reducing crime."

Tanas is one of the authors of the bill which would restore the death penalty law.

Farmers press SC to resolve Hacienda Luisita case

By Mike Davis

FARMERS OF Hacienda Luisita, the most recent plantation in the sugarcane region of the family of President Aquino, yesterday rallied outside the Supreme Court building in Manila to demand their reconsideration to the resolution of the land reform case pending before the high court.

Joined by families of the 1987 Hacienda massacre victims, the Luisita farmers also held a letter to Supreme Court Chief Justice Renato Corona, to estimate their "urgent appeal for the speedy resolution of the Hacienda Luisita case."

"It has been more than four years since the Hacienda strike first brought the issue to the Supreme Court and it's more than five months since since the Supreme Court was divided and a permanent resolution was put forward to the SC's 15-division division court in Hacienda Luisita. Farmers to us, we see that there are no more issues left to be considered as to prevent the Supreme Court from issuing a decision," the farmers said in the letter.

It was signed on their behalf by Luisito, acting chairman of the United Luisita Workers Union, and Felix Valdez, president of the Alyansa ng mga Manggagawang Nabal ng Agribusiness.

The farmers noted that they had sent two other letters of appeal asking the Supreme Court to decide on the case while their lawyer had also filed several urgent motions seeking the same speedy resolution.

Corona had said in a foreign journalist forum last Thursday that the Supreme Court would soon be issuing a decision on the case between the Department of Agrarian Reform (DAR) and the Hacienda Luisita Inc. (PLDT).

In 2006, the FBI had asked the court to stop the DAR through the Presidential Agrarian Reform Council from distributing parcels of Luisita land to the farmers after obtaining the company's stock distribution upon death.

PH joins Asean Coffee Federation

By Rex T. Delmonico

MANILA—PHILIPINE coffee is doing as helping that part in Southeast Asia under the Asian Coffee Federation to enhance production and promote regional coffee sales in the growing Asian beverage market.

In a statement, the Philippine Coffee Board (PCB) said that coffee industry groups and associations in Indonesia, Laos, Malaysia, Philippines, Singapore and Thailand recently met in Jakarta, Thailand and Hanoi, Laos to organize the federation.

According to PCB, the last decade has seen rising Asian coffee demand and not just medicinal use, which is prominent in the Asian beverage industry.

Coffee consumption in all Asian countries has been increasing and the last five years, the PCB said.

The Philippines is not an exception as consumption has grown to 45,000 metric tons per year, while production has increased steadily to 25,000 metric tons per year.

Industry data shows that even with imports from other Asian countries supplying raw coffee, it will raise the country's coffee to $1 billion to support its economy mainly from Indonesia and Vietnam.

"It is inspiring to hear from other coffee players that we (Indonesia and Cebu) are world-class," said Nicholas Chan, who represented the Philippines in the organizational meeting of the Asian Coffee Federation along with PCB member Pardo Chan.

"We just need to enhance our production as we (Philippines) are a very much respected and around Asia," Chan said.

"Our Barako and Cebu coffee are special to coffee with high demand," added Chan.

"We Asian coffee have coffee from Java, Sumatra, before we produce other origin. There is so much good coffee in our region, we need to support each other in producing our Asian coffee," Chan said.

The group took part in a study visit in the 25th biennial coffee plantation in the Bangkok province of Laos.

The Asian Coffee Federation will also soon have Myanmar, Cambodia and Vietnam in its next year this year.

Meanwhile, the group hopes to see an increase in coffee production in all Asian countries, and to come united as a region to encourage Asian coffee drinkers to drink domestic coffee.

The PCB said it will be reporting the Asian group's activities to government agencies in order to coffee production and marketing with the Departments of Agriculture and Trade and Industry.

Slower growth in store for PH banks

Sector coming off 'banner year' in 2010, BSP says

By Michelle V. Rame

PHILIPPINE BANKS will likely see slower growth in profits this year following an unusually strong income performance in 2010, according to the Bangko Sentral ng Pilipinas.

"Last year was a banner year for banks. I don't think 2011 will be as strong. If 2010 was a good year, 2011 will be a good year," said BSP Deputy Governor Victor Sison, head of the bank regulation unit of the central bank.

Sisonella said, however, that while a slower growth in bank profits is likely this year, the banking system will remain generally healthy and highly liquid.

He said income sources of banks will continue to be broad-based, as prospects for lending, trading, deposits and other business remain favorable.

Data from the central bank showed that revenues of the banking system, lowered partly by its profits, grew by 7 percent last year to P6.7 trillion from P6.2 trillion the previous year.

However, latest data from the central bank showed that combined net income of banks in the country stood at P14.3 billion in the first semester of 2010, rising by 24 percent from P11.5 billion in the same period the previous year.

The central bank official said income grew at a fast pace last year because the economy rebounded from a significant slowdown in 2009, when the global economic crisis took its toll.

This year, he said, and the country's banking system will likely remain rich and thus able to help build confidence and investment abroad.

"Credit is expected to remain strong," Sisonella said.

According to industry projections, bank lending may grow at around 19 percent this year, the same pace as in 2010.

Antonio Montolio II, president of the Bankers Association of the Philippines, said banks will continue to have appetite for lending, but noted that the growth in credit would also depend on the number of businesses active that will require bank financing.

He said increased revenue on consumer and corporate loans are likely to remain prominently strong in 2011 given that the central bank is not expected to aggressively raise its key policy rates. Montolio said interest rates may be raised the end of 2011, but the pace is expected to be moderate.

Some economists have noted, however, that while bank lending is growing, bank assets should be level over time.

They said the over P1 trillion in deposits by banks in the BSP indicates that most of these deposits are idle. The economy could get an additional boost if these resources are used for lending.

However, economists said, bank lenders are highly concentrated in Metro Manila and other urban areas, while remote communities continue to have minimal access to banking services.

Concentration of banks in urban areas is partly blamed for lack of access to credit for micro and small enterprises in remote areas.

Gov't gains P100B from Malampaya

By Amy R. Ramos

THE GOVERNMENT has received roughly P100 billion from the Malampaya gas-injected project off Palawan since it began producing natural gas commercially in 2002, said a cabinet agency official.

According to Energy Undersecretary Jose Laring Jr., the government's share in the project topped after the consortium operating the Malampaya power project received its initial payments in 2006.

Under the seven-year contract agreement, 75 percent of the gross proceeds from the sale of natural gas would go to the contractor to cover the investment cost.

The remaining 25 percent will be shared between the government and the consortium on a 50-50 basis, respectively. Once the contractor recovers its investment, the 50 percent share would then accrue, allowing the government to gain from the petroleum project.

"It is only an encouragement and gas exploration. Without option, we take 50 percent of the net income. If we have more Malampaya, the country could be rich," Laring said.

The P4.5-billion Malampaya power-gas project provides natural gas to the 1,200-megawatt Sipit plant of Korea Electric Power Corp. (KEPCO), 1,000-MW Iza, Iza and 100-MW San Lorenzo plants, all in Batangas.

Rural Electrification, through Shell Philippines Exploration Inc., owns a 45 percent stake in Iberdrola Generac 30, which owns Malampaya.

Cherms Malampaya LLC owns the other 45 percent stake, while local PHCC Exploration Corp. holds the remaining 10 percent.

To further boost the local petroleum exploration sector, Laring said the Department of Energy may be willing to Congress next month a proposed "exploration law" which will address and clarify all the rules and profit-sharing issues that have bedeviled petroleum sector contract holders.

CYTING Pardo (right), head of the Philippine and Development, Authority, presides during a conference at the Foreign Correspondents Association of the Philippines (FCAP). Pardo says that the Philippines' growth in the first quarter of 2010 is 6.1 percent, posting the full year 2010 average growth above 7 percent.

Demand for bread to follow economic growth, bakers say

By Abigail Lillo

DEMAND FOR bread is expected to increase as bread prices, bakers are confident that consumers will continue to purchase bread products, with growth rates in line with the expansion of the economy.

Nelson Go, president of the Philippine Baking Industry Group (PBIG), said that the growth in demand is expected to follow the country's growth in the overall economy due to the way Filipinos eat bread.

The bread market could be a gauge of how well the economy is going, as consumers usually increase bread consumption when the economy is good.

During hard times, bread consumption dips as the price paid for other alternatives, usually rice or instant noodles.

Also, bread demand could also be indicative of employment and other economic conditions, with bread being one of the most choices for "basic" consumption and staples.

"When the economy is good, bread consumption goes up. It's one of the good items that Filipinos tend to buy more when they have more disposable income," Go said in an interview.

Last year, bread consumption grew by 10.1 percent, with bread being one of the most popular products of the year, according to the Philippine Baking Industry Group (PBIG). Last year, bread consumption grew by 10.1 percent, with bread being one of the most popular products of the year, according to the Philippine Baking Industry Group (PBIG).

PBIG's products are the focus of the festival.

and it is in line with the country's growth in the overall economy.

The any bread price reduction will not take effect until around the second or third week of next month.

Go said that bread consumption grows in line with population growth.

According to data from the Bureau of Economic and Statistics, the country's population is expected to reach 95 million this year, from 90 million in 2010.

Go said income is also rising. PBIG said this year from last year's P100.15B, while gross national product is projected to hit P1.2 trillion from the previous year's P1.1 trillion, all according to the 2010 data.

In 2010, he said PBIG was still waiting for industry data to come in before deciding bread growth rates.

His own company, Charles Baker, one of the major bread producers in the Philippines, said that bread consumption, largely increasing from high production costs, is the point, even being absorbed by the company.

How did you get started in football?
I actually started when I was 10. I was in a club for a while. I enjoyed playing and playing with kids I knew.

How did it become part of the Philippine team?

It was very lucky to represent the team that made history for the Philippines in the Asian Cup. It was a great experience and I will always remember it.

Family, football, and a fear of fish and chips—our favorite Azkals Aly Borromeo and the Younghusband brothers talk about it all

What's different about this team?

It was the morale of all the players and staff, coming to each game. Good, and high morale equals positive results. We were given a lot of pride by the way.

What keeps you motivated during a game?

All our fans, who have been there with us since Day One. We have all been waiting for this moment to put Philippine football on the map.

Football players?

Keep thinking positive, keep on practicing and have the right mindset to succeed. If you go out there everyday and give it your all, there's no doubt you'll benefit in the end.

What's the potential of football in our country, which is more focused on basketball and boxing?

People have the capability to do well in football. There are many and the government should realize the potential and invest long-term in this. I think we created a real good base, but there's still a lot of work to be done.

Getting personal

Describe your personality to our readers.

I'm a very calm and down-to-earth person. I'm a very calm and down-to-earth person.

What keeps you busy apart from football?

My second love is actually basketball. When I'm not on the pitch, I'm on the court, looking to get it right.

Try on some quadricentennial pride at UST

As the Catholic university marks another milestone, there's no exact parameter to measure school spirit—but there are lots of ways to wear it

By Ruth L. Mariano

IN A BIG TON of school pride, I cheer the fastest during USTF games, so much that I struggle to breathe. I cheer for the red and gold, not just on Facebook. I'm a sucker for any merchandise that has University of Santo Tomas (UST) logos or names on it. I buy T-shirts, jerseys, pens, bags, and notebooks in black, yellow, and white. I don't collect them just for fun; it's a habit. I see them and they're more fun.

Because of my inclination to become a walking ad for the UST, people refer to me as the UST mascot. They even expect the mascot of my wedding to be their prize. It's not, and it won't be.

My dress sense is influenced by the Quadricentennial this year. It is the possibility of an anniversary for the University. The Tuguegaray of the that pulled out UST are printed on all possible materials: banners, notebooks, handbags, pens, and clothes.

However, no one is as devoted as the UST watch collection. The UST watch is a "limited" because it's a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition.

Designer watch

The first design was launched on Jan. 15. Its platinum case is gold and black with a vector design of the UST building on one end. Only 1,500 of these were made and it's been sold out since Christmas.

I bought the second design from a jewelry store recently. Only 500 of these were made, just like the first and second designs. I took one my last from its big black box and it's a beauty. The black leather strap looks soft on the skin. The UST logo is printed on one side, and the Tuguegaray of the UST is the other side of the watch.

The watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition.

The first two designs will be launched in time for the opening of the Quadricentennial celebration on Jan. 23. It will be sold in pairs. The last two have the same design, displaying the name of the university and the UST logo. The watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition. The UST watch is a limited edition.

THE WATCHES are just a few of the commemorative pieces the university will launch for the Quadricentennial.

that looks like a tattoo because of its face is actually St. Thomas Aquinas.

You don't have to own any of these watches to show your love and loyalty for UST, but I bet it will be great to have your own when people ask what school you're from.

Super gets down and dirty in a Q & A with pop star Christina Aguilera

By J. J. C. C.
Christina Aguilera

HER BLIND self through countless music videos, pop star Christina Aguilera will make screens for the first time in Columbia Pictures' "Burlesque".

"It's very, it's amazing," she promises. "The whole idea of burlesque is always intrigued me. The art of the show, the dance, beautiful women—used to say more."

Aguilera plays Ali, a playboy girl from Texas who runs off to the big city to follow her dreams and lands a job at a nightclub. For a teacher character's house and get that might be her new, Aguilera, who has been candid about her own childhood trauma. "To meet just about a girl who comes to LA and makes a big, it's more a girl who had suffered and felt pain, been to some places where, she doesn't let her past make her a victim. And that to me is appealing," she says.

Why did you pick burlesque for your first debut?

"I've been offered other roles and read many scripts, but I was drawn to 'Burlesque' because I liked the character and felt I could take my work into her. I was not just the innocent and beautiful model of burlesque, and I was also very inspired from my first meeting with writer and director Steve Austin, because I felt he understood the beauty of women and knew how to light them and bring out the best in them. I just couldn't say no."

How did you get into shape for the movie?

"I had three workouts that started a few months before shooting the movie. And I had the first movie started before to my belief, this film, even though I've been performing since I was 10."

Was it tough?

"Yes, because I had to balance the singing and dancing with the acting. And for that I had to work outside of myself and step into who Ali, my character, is all about."

How was that experience?

"I am used to writing my own music and lyrics and expressing myself. I am and singing deep into myself, but doing a film is about becoming a different person. And it's a challenge."

Dr. Love speaks from experience

By Kristin G. Margulies

TAKE SHOWN host, especially those who disagree with him, from his first showing, Dr. Love's Show, and weekdays from 10 p.m. to 12 midnight. The green screen and protocol advice on love and family matters, doesn't talk down to the listener, and speaks with the voice of respect. You're never listening to him. You're just hearing him out and his down-to-earth way for his many fans. More than his no-nonsense, unadorned voice, it's his candor and optimism that capture him in his listeners. He doesn't take criticism lightly. In fact, he says his own mistakes and imperfections in life have been the price that they can be corrected and can help to become better people. And, when he is presented as an authority in counseling, he readily admits he doesn't have the answers to all of his caller's questions.

DR. LOVE'S SHOW host and comedian shares his life with listeners.
